

Find the job. Prove the resume.

Your first ten minutes, your premium career dashboard, and a practical routine for managing an ongoing job search.

Evidence stays yours	TraceScout works from the resume lines you review and attest. Nothing is added on your behalf.
Scores support decisions	A score compares an attested resume with one posting. It is not a hiring decision or outcome promise.
Privacy is explicit	Your data is protected under TraceScout controls. Some processors may operate outside Canada; see the Privacy Policy.

Updated September 29, 2026

tracescout.lovable.app · Support: tracescout.lovable.app/support

START HERE

Your first ten minutes

Complete these five steps in order. Once the journey is complete and your resume is attested, Home becomes your ongoing career dashboard.

1. Set your search preferences

Choose your country of search, target roles, seniority and location preference. Precise role titles produce clearer results.

2. Upload your resume

Upload a PDF or Word file. TraceScout reads it into lines so later work can trace back to your source.

3. Review what was read

Correct anything that was read incorrectly and remove anything that should not be there.

4. Attest the version

Confirm that every line is true and yours. Matching and tailoring work from the attested version.

5. Review matches

Read each score, strengths and gaps against the real posting. A lower score is information, not a fault.

Attestation boundary. Candidate claims are candidate-attested. TraceScout does not independently verify employment, qualifications or skills.

No matches yet? Confirm that preferences are saved and a resume version is attested. A narrow search can also produce fewer matches.

Your career dashboard

Premium Home has four zones. Each summary loads independently, so one unavailable area does not stop the others.

1. Your week

A rolling seven-day retrospective and current snapshot. It summarizes meaningful activity; it is not an email.

2. Act now

Opportunity Watch and Career Pulse surface strong current matches and meaningful changes since review.

3. Keep moving

Your Pipeline and Your search setup show work already in motion and the saved settings shaping the search.

4. Your search context

Your progress, Around your search, Companies you are watching, and Shared resume activity add context without claiming certainty.

Role follow. Your saved target roles and search focus are the current role-follow equivalent. Skills follow is deferred until TraceScout has a structured skills taxonomy.

DASHBOARD ZONE 2

Act now

Use these two surfaces to see what deserves attention since your last review.

Opportunity Watch

- Shows top current matches at or above your saved threshold.
- The full page at /opportunity-watch lets you change the threshold and mark the current set reviewed.
- Its review state does not rewrite, dismiss or mark the underlying matches.

Career Pulse

- Shows meaningful changes since your last Career Pulse review.
- The full page at /career-pulse provides a timeline and review action.
- Its baseline is independent from Opportunity Watch.

Remember: neither surface predicts recruiter interest, shortlisting or an interview. They organize recorded TraceScout information for your judgement.

DASHBOARD ZONE 3

Keep moving

Your Pipeline

- A read-only view of applications, stages, matches and prepared materials already in TraceScout.
- Keep application stages current so the summary remains useful.

Your search setup

- Shows your saved country, target roles, location preference and active resume version.
- These settings shape matches, Opportunity Watch and market context.

Your search context

Your progress

Meaningful career actions such as applications and prepared materials. It is career momentum, not a login streak or effort score. Full view: </progress>.

Around your search

Recent public-posting context based on saved country, target roles, location and remote preference. Small samples may be unavailable. It does not estimate salary or infer skills. Full view: </market>.

Companies you are watching

Watch from a Browse posting. Company Watch uses exact normalized company names and shows recent public roles; it does not infer related employers or guarantee availability. Full view: </watchlist>.

Shared resume activity

Aggregate activity for enabled public resume links. It is anonymous and unattributed: TraceScout does not know who opened the link, their employer, or whether they are a recruiter. It does not count unique people. Full view: </shared-activity>.

No identity claim. An open is not proof of employer interest, shortlisting, or an interview request. A link may refresh while it remains open.

A practical daily workflow

1. Scan the dashboard	Read Your week, then check Opportunity Watch and Career Pulse for anything new since review.
2. Move active work	Update application stages and use Your Pipeline and Your progress to decide the next concrete action.
3. Bring in a posting	If you find a role elsewhere, paste its real title and full posting into TraceScout so it can be scored against your attested resume.
4. Tailor truthfully	A tailored resume may reword or reorder supported content, but every line must remain traceable to the attested source resume.
5. Prepare and apply	Use the cover letter, work plan and interview preparation where available. Apply on the employer's own posting.
6. Share deliberately	Enable a client-facing resume link only when you want to share it. Rotate or disable it when access should change.

Scores, attestation and verification

Match score

A comparison between one posting and the relevant attested resume. Strengths are supported areas; gaps are requirements not currently evidenced. The score supports your decision and does not rank your worth or guarantee an outcome.

Attested source resume

The resume version you reviewed and confirmed line by line. You are responsible for the truth of the content you attest.

Client-facing verified resume

A tailored resume checked against the relevant version of the candidate's attested source resume. "Verified" does not mean every employment, qualification, skill or claim was independently verified.

Reworded content

Rewording must remain traceable to candidate-attested source information. Nothing may be invented or added on the candidate's behalf.

Apply your judgement. TraceScout supports job-seeker and recruiter judgement. It does not replace professional judgement, an applicant tracking system, or an employer's hiring process.

Privacy and control

- Data is protected under TraceScout controls. Some processors may operate outside Canada.
- Public resume links are created and shared by you and can be rotated or disabled.
- Shared-link activity is aggregate, anonymous and unattributed.
- See the current Privacy Policy at tracescout.lovable.app/privacy.

Help and quick reference

Support Center	tracescout.lovable.app/support — current articles for the dashboard, resume, matches, tailoring, applications, verification and troubleshooting.
Quick guide online	tracescout.lovable.app/guide — the current web version of this guide.
Privacy Policy	tracescout.lovable.app/privacy — information collection, use, processors, transfers and your choices.
Terms of Service	tracescout.lovable.app/terms — current service terms and important limitations.
Send feedback	Use Send feedback in the footer of any TraceScout page. Do not include passwords or payment details.

Common checks

- Dashboard not showing: finish the journey and attest the current resume version.
- Market context unavailable: the saved search may have too little recent public-posting data.
- Company missing: watch it from the action row of one of its Browse postings.
- Shared activity quiet: confirm the resume link is enabled and remember activity is not a unique-viewer count.
- A source line is wrong: correct the source by uploading a corrected resume and attest the newer version before tailoring again.

TraceScout is a product of PostaraTrend Technologies Inc.